Dear Speaker Damon,

As former Associate Justice Raymond Austin writes, "Known as the flagship of American Indian tribal courts, the Navajo Nation Court System has earned preeminent status among American Indian tribal courts in North America." Navajo Courts and Navajo Common Law, 2007. Lately; however, our Navajo courts struggle to support their services through all 13 judicial districts and the Supreme Court. Each year we know we must stretch our available funds to cover all our government services, which our sister branch often receives less than needed.

Thanks to the foresight of the Chief Justice and the perseverance of the Navajo Department of Justice our Judicial Branch will be given the funds it so desperately needs and will be able to support the services our Navajo People require to receive justice. Through the appropriate appropriation process our Judicial Branch will receive the funds to rebuild our court system to its preeminent status. We look forward to working with the Judicial Branch.

Thank you to the Navajo Department of Justice for their work and thank you to the Navajo Nation Council for acknowledging the hard work of our tribal attorney by reimbursing the litigation funds. We sign CAP-24-21 into law.

Sincerely,

Jonathan Nez, President
THE NAVAJO NATION

Myron Lizer, Vice President

RESOLUTION OF THE
 NAVAJO NATION COUNCIL
 24th NAVAJO NATION COUNCIL - THIRD YEAR, 2021

AN ACT

RELATING TO BUDGET AND FINANCE COMMITTEE, LAW AND ORDER COMMITTEE AND NAABIK'ÍYÁTI' COMMITTEE AND NAVAJO NATION COUNCIL; ESTABLISHING THE NAVAJO NATION HASHKÉÉJÍ NAHAT'Á BÉESO BÁ HOOGHAN BY AMENDING TITLE TWELVE OF THE NAVAJO NATION CODE; DIRECTING THAT THE AWARD RECEIVED THROUGH NAVAJO NATION V. DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR, NO. 14-cv-1909 (TSC), BE DEPOSITED IN THE HASHKÉÉJÍ NAHAT'Á BÉESO BÁ HOOGHAN AFTER REIMBURSEMENT OF LITIGATION COSTS; DIRECTING THAT THE PROCEEDS FROM FUTURE LITIGATIONS RELATED TO THE JUDICIAL BRANCH'S P.L. 93-638 CONTRACTS OR ANNUAL FUNDING AGREEMENTS BE DEPOSITED IN THE HASHKÉÉJÍ NAHAT'Á BÉESO BÁ HOOGHAN; ESTABLISHING THAT THE FIXED COST LITIGATION ACCOUNT SHALL BE REIMBURSED FOR LITIGATION COSTS

BE IT ENACTED:

SECTION ONE. AUTHORITY

- A. The Navajo Nation Council is the governing body of the Navajo Nation and empowered to enact positive law of the Navajo Nation. 2 N.N.C. §§ 102(A) and 164(A).
- B. The Naabik'íyáti' Committee of the Navajo Nation Council is empowered to review all proposed legislation which requires final action by the Navajo Nation Council. 2 N.N.C. § 164(A)(9).
- C. The Budget and Finance Committee of the Navajo Nation Council is empowered to review and recommend to the Navajo Nation Council the budgeting, appropriation, investment, and management of all funds. 2 N.N.C. § 301(B)(2).
- D. The Law and Order Committee of the Navajo Nation Council is empowered to provide oversight over the Judicial Branch of the Navajo Nation and the Navajo Nation Department of Justice. 2 N.N.C. §§ 601(C)(1) and (2).

SECTION TWO. FINDINGS

- A. In the 1950s, the Navajo Nation shifted from a federal Court of Indian Offenses court system to a tribal court system due to Congress enacting Public Law 83-280 which granted certain states criminal jurisdiction over Indians on reservations and allowed civil litigation that had come under tribal or federal court jurisdiction to be handled by state courts. Navajo Nation Council Resolution No. CO-69-58.

- B. Since its inception, the independence and strength of the Navajo Nation Judicial Branch has been a cornerstone for protecting the sovereignty of the Navajo Nation. Navajo Nation Council Resolution No. CD-94-85.
- C. The Navajo Nation Council has consistently sought to ensure Navajo tradition and Diné Fundamental Law as foundational to the Diné jurisprudence practiced in the Navajo Nation Judicial Branch. CD-94-85. Diné Fundamental Law is embodied in statutes and the Courts of the Navajo Nation are required to implement the principles and practice of Diné Fundamental Law. Diné Fundamental Law distinguishes Navajo jurisprudence from Anglo-American jurisprudence because Diné Fundamental Law embodies Diné customs, traditions, values, and beliefs.
- D. The Navajo Nation Council, for decades, has sought to ensure the independence of the Courts of the Navajo Nation. The Judiciary Committee, in recommending judicial reform in 1985, stated that the Navajo Nation Courts have "an inherent right to the financial support needed to carry out their duties... and the Judicial Branch is a separate branch of government and in its duty to operate efficiently and economically must be able to make day-to-day decisions regarding operating costs and expenditures with a minimum of interference and delay." Judiciary Committee (attachment to CD-94-85).
- E. In 1982, the Navajo Peacemaker Court was created by Navajo judges through vote of the Judicial Conference. The Navajo judges wanted to find an alternative to Anglo-American judicial methods that had roots in Diné Fundamental Law and that incorporated Diné wisdom, methods, and customs in resolving disputes. At the time, the Peacemaking Court did not properly reflect Diné traditions because standard court procedures, rules, and practices were applied to the Peacemaking process which made the process strongly resemble Anglo-American dispute resolution methods rather than Diné traditions and culture.
- F. In early 2000, the Peacemaking Court was renamed, rules were replaced with Guidelines, and the traditional Diné Fundamental Law principles and practices were better reflected in the Courts and in Peacemaking.
- G. The Judicial Branch continues to implement Title 1 of the Navajo Nation Code, Diné Bi Beenahaz'áanii, and recognize Diné jurisprudence and Fundamental Law as foundational to the entire branch and the interworking of the Courts, the Peacemaking Program, and the Probation and Parole Program.

- H. In 1975, Congress enacted the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (ISDEAA), 25 U.S.C. §§ 5301 et seq. (P.L. 93-638, As Amended), to assist Indian tribes in assuming responsibility for federal government programs. In 2012, the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) and the Navajo Nation Judicial Branch entered into a five (5) year self-determination contract (aka "638 contract") pursuant to the ISDEAA whereby the BIA funded the Judicial Branch's provision of federal government programs. This included ensuring that Diné jurisprudence was reflected throughout the Judicial Branch.
- I. Judicial Branch leadership and staff have worked tirelessly for years to illuminate the grave underfunding of the Navajo Nation judicial system by the federal government, particularly the BIA. The Judicial Branch timely submitted a proposed annual funding agreement for Calendar Year 2014 in the amount of $17,055,517 to the BIA on October 3, 2013 for its federal self-determination contract. The BIA, however, failed to respond to the Judicial Branch's proposal as statutorily required and attempted to partially decline the funding amount.
- J. In 2014, the Chief Justice of the Navajo Nation requested the Navajo Nation Attorney General and Department of Justice (NNDJOJ) to file a lawsuit against the U.S. Department of Interior (DOI) and Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) for violating the ISDEAA. The Attorney General subsequently filed suit against the DOI and other federal government programs on behalf of the Navajo Nation contending that the BIA failed to approve or decline the Calendar Year 2014 annual funding agreement within the statutorily mandated ninety (90) day window and thus, the BIA had to deem the annual funding agreement approved as a matter of law. The lawsuit was titled Navajo Nation v. Department of Interior, et al., No. 14-cv-1909 (TSC)
- K. On April 4, 2017, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled in favor of the Navajo Nation and the Judicial Branch. On June 12, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia ruled in favor of the Navajo Nation and the Judicial Branch and awarded the Navajo Nation $15.7 million. The federal government did not appeal the decision and the final award in the amount of $18,279,923.32, attached as Exhibit A, includes statutory interest to the date of the award.
- L. NNDJOJ expended Fixed Cost Litigation Account funds to litigate against the DOI and other federal government agencies on behalf of the Judicial Branch. Exhibit B [Marked as "confidential" by the Navajo Nation Attorney General pursuant to 2 N.N.C. § 164 (A) (6).]

- M. Through its leadership, the Judicial Branch, with the assistance of NNDOJ, continues to fight to increase the federal self-determination contract to a level of funding that reflects the federally contracted work that the Judicial Branch performs. For years, the Judicial Branch has argued that the underfunding by the BIA of its federal self-determination contract has created a void of available services to Navajo people. The Judicial Branch has consistently maintained that the $17,055,517 originally requested for Calendar Year 2014 was based upon the actual fiscal needs of the Judicial Branch to provide the federally contracted services on an annual basis.
- N. The Navajo Nation recognizes that this initial lawsuit turned on the failure of the BIA to respond to the Judicial Branch as required by federal statute and continues to fight to that ensure that the Judicial Branch federal self-determination contracts are fully funded.
- O. The Navajo Nation recognizes the substantial needs of the Judicial Branch to be fully funded to continue developing one of the most complex indigenous judicial systems throughout the world that fully contemplates Diné jurisprudence and Diné Bi Beenahaz'áanii. Navajo Nation sovereignty demands a comprehensive system that fully integrates Diné Bi Beenahaz'áanii into peacemaking and court systems to provide a judicial system to Navajo people that is reflective of Navajo traditions and culture.
- P. The Navajo Nation recognizes that a fully funded, independent judiciary and peacemaking system is necessary to protect the sovereignty of the Navajo Nation and respects the expertise of the Judicial Branch leadership to identify the priorities for expending the funds awarded by the federal court through Navajo Nation v. Department of Interior, et al., No. 14-cv-1909 (TSC), as well as the funds from any subsequent awards or settlements.
- Q. Pursuant to 12 N.N.C. § 820(K) of the Navajo Nation Appropriations Act, funds received in excess of the initial or current revenue projections, e.g., court awards or settlements, shall be deposited into the General Fund Unreserved, Undesignated Fund balance unless otherwise designated by the Navajo Nation Council.

- R. The Navajo Nation appreciates that the Judicial Branch is a unique judicial system and has funding needs that are not considered during the annual comprehensive budget process and that funding of this nature, i.e., an award from the federal court, can and should be directed primarily to the Judicial Branch to develop long-term planning and systems that benefit the entire Judicial Branch and enhance judicial services across the Navajo Nation.

ORDER

In 2014, Plaintiff Navajo Nation (the Nation) filed this action against Defendant Department of the Interior (DOI) for failing to disburse calendar year (CY) 2014 funding to the Nation according to the Nation’s proposed CY 2014 annual funding agreement. In 2017, following the court’s grant of summary judgment to DOI, the D.C. Circuit reversed and concluded that judgment should be entered for the Nation.

The parties therefore agree that the court should grant Plaintiff’s Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 15), and deny Defendants’ Cross-Motion for Summary Judgment (ECF No. 18). They disagree, however, as to appropriate damages. Upon consideration of the parties’ filings regarding an entry of judgment (ECF Nos. 37, 38, and 39), and the parties’ filings regarding the reasonableness of Plaintiff’s damages (ECF Nos. 44, 45, and 46), and for the reasons set forth below, the Nation’s motion for summary judgment is hereby GRANTED, DOI’s cross-motion for summary judgment is hereby DENIED, and the Nation’s request for $15,762,985 in damages is hereby GRANTED.

I. BACKGROUND

This case arises from a contract between the Nation and the Navajo Regional Office of the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), a federal agency within DOI, under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act of 1975, 25 U.S.C. §§ 5301 et seq. (ISDEAA). Under this contract, the parties must negotiate annual funding agreements (AFAs), which determine the annual level of funding provided to the Nation.

During its 2013 negotiations with DOI, the Nation sought $17,055,517 to fund its Tribal Courts Program for CY 2014. This was an amount substantially larger than had been proposed or awarded in previous years. The Nation submitted a “Scope of Work” document outlining the reasons for its request (ECF No. 44-1, Ex. 1 Attach. A at 3), as well as a summary of how its proposed budget would be allocated among ten different categories. (ECF No. 44-1, Ex. 1 Attach. B.)

The Nation hand-delivered the proposed AFA to the BIA on October 4, 2013. Pursuant to BIA regulations, a proposal is “deemed approved” if not declined within 90 days. 25 C.F.R. § 900.18. The BIA issued a partial declination on January 15, 2014, 13 days overdue. In the course of this litigation, DOI argued that the partial government shutdown, which lasted until October 17, 2013, delayed its receipt of the proposed AFA, pushing back the deadline; DOI additionally argued that principles of equitable estoppel barred the Nation from prevailing on its claims. The parties cross-moved for summary judgment, and the court ruled for DOI. (ECF No. 30, Mem. Op. at 15.)

The D.C. Circuit reversed, holding that the proposed AFA was received on the date it was delivered, that the BIA’s partial declination was untimely, and that, therefore, the Nation’s proposal was deemed approved as a matter of law. Navajo Nation v. U.S. Dep’t of Interior, 852

F.3d 1124, 1130 (D.C. Cir. 2017). That Court did not, however, determine what damages should be awarded to the Nation. Id.

The parties have since agreed that the court should enter judgment for the Nation, but disagree as to appropriate damages. (ECF No. 36, Joint Status Report at 2.) Following the parties' filings regarding an entry of judgment, the court ordered that proper damages are an amount that is "facially reasonable." (Minute Order, February 15, 2019 (citing Seneca Nation of Indians v. U.S. Dep't of Health & Human Servs., 945 F. Supp. 2d 135, 152 (D.D.C. 2013)).) The parties agreed to submit a further round of briefing as to whether Plaintiff's requested damages, totaling $15,762,985—representing the proposed AFA minus the $1,292,532 approved by the BIA—are facially reasonable. (ECF No. 43, Joint Status Report at 1.)

II. ANALYSIS

The court finds that damages of $15,762,985 are facially reasonable.

In its brief, DOI argues that Plaintiff's requested amount is unreasonably large compared to the requested funding in previous years, and additionally that such a large award would have disproportionate and adverse effects on the BIA's budget for tribal services more generally. (ECF No. 45, Defs. Resp. at 5, 8–9.) DOI thus advocates for an unspecified award of damages using $2,130,077 and $780,418—the differences between the requested funding in 2012 and 2013, and the approved funding in 2014, respectively—as "guideposts." (Id. at 12.) The Nation is correct that the ISDEAA emphasizes discretion and does not require proportionality between one year's proposed funding and the next. (ECF No. 46, Pl. Reply at 4.) However, such proportionality, or disproportionality, may serve as a helpful benchmark in determining what damages are facially reasonable.

DOI contends that several items in the proposed AFA are of questionable reasonableness. For example, it points to a six-fold increase in travel expenses, several one-off expenses related to the repair and maintenance of facilities, and a 500 percent increase in requested personnel salary and fringe benefits, forming the bulk of the proposed funding—$13,323,385—despite a corresponding decrease in the Nation’s judicial caseload. (Defs. Resp. at 6–7.) The Nation does not respond to these criticisms in detail, but argues that the “Scope of Work” document submitted as part of its proposal addresses its need for increased funding. (Pl. Reply at 5.)

The Nation’s “Scope of Work” document adequately outlines its justifications for such an increase in funding. The document points to several “severe shortfalls” in funding, and additionally notes that the $17 million sum was not as unprecedented as DOI suggests: roughly the same amount had been proposed as part of the Nation’s budget priorities two years previously. (Ex. 1 Attach. A at 3.) The only applicable case to consider a similar question, Seneca Nation, concluded that such an explanation of a “perceived funding gap” was facially reasonable, even if the proposed increase there was not as significant as in this case. 945 F. Supp. 2d at 152. Moreover, a decrease in caseload is not dispositive of the Nation’s budgetary needs; faced with shortfalls, it is plausible that this decrease was a response to inadequate funding, not a refutation of it.

DOI’s argument that the proposed amount is unreasonable because the Nation had “not even spent all the funds awarded to it” is likewise unpersuasive. (Defs. Resp. at 10–11.) As the Nation notes in its reply brief, this does not accurately describe its expenditures since 2012, which indicate that 99 percent of the funding under the contract was obligated as of December 31, 2018. (Pl. Reply at 1 n.1.) Furthermore, as with the Nation’s caseload, it is not unreasonable that the Nation would be hesitant in allocating the funding it did receive, given that it contends this funding was drastically insufficient to meet its needs.

DOI additionally argues that an award of full damages would result in more than 60 percent of the BIA's total annual funding for tribal courts being allocated to the Nation alone, a result both disproportionate and likely to divert existing resources from other tribes or programs. (Defs. Resp. at 8–9.) On this, however, the law is clear. The Supreme Court has repeatedly stressed that “as long as Congress has appropriated sufficient legally unrestricted funds to pay contracts . . . the Government normally cannot back out of a promise to pay on grounds of insufficient appropriations” absent “something special about the promises at issue.” Cherokee Nation of Okla. v. Leavitt, 543 U.S. 631, 632 (2005). See also Salazar v. Ramah Navajo Chapter, 567 U.S. 182, 191 (2012) (holding that tribal contractors “need not keep track of agencies’ shifting priorities and competing obligations; rather, they may trust that the Government will honor its contractual promises.”).

This is particularly essential in light of concerns regarding the “Government’s past failure adequately to reimburse tribes’ indirect administrative costs,” Cherokee Nation, 543 U.S. at 639, as well as the historical underfunding of both the Nation’s courts and tribal justice systems more generally. See ECF No. 44, Pl. Mem. at 2–4. Arguments that a financial windfall to the Nation would come “at the expense of other Indian tribes . . . impermissibly invite the Court to meddle with [Government] contracts and ‘render its promises nonbinding.’” Seneca Nation, 945 F. Supp. 2d at 151 (quoting Cherokee Nation, 543 U.S. at 641).¹

The Nation's brief regarding an entry of judgment argued against a facial reasonableness standard, insisting that it was entitled to the requested damages in full by virtue of the governing regulation. (ECF No. 38, Pl. Resp. at 4.) 25 C.F.R. § 900.18 states that, when a proposal is not declined within 90 days and is thus deemed approved, the Secretary "shall award the contract . . . and add to the contract the full amount of funds pursuant to section 106(a) of the [ISDEAA]" (emphasis added). Indeed, the D.C. Circuit quoted this language in determining that the Nation's damages were not limited by the "funds the BIA would otherwise have expended." Navajo Nation, 852 F.3d at 1130. Despite the court's February 15, 2019 order that proper damages are an amount that is facially reasonable, the Nation continues to argue implicitly that this regulatory language makes its requested damages facially reasonable per se. See, e.g., Pl. Reply at 2 ("An award in that amount is facially reasonable because it is fully supported by the applicable law.").

There is some ambiguity as to the proper standard for award of damages, and both parties have marshaled several arguments in favor of their respective theories. Although the D.C. Circuit quoted the "full amount of funds" language, it did so in the context of rejecting DOI's attempt to cap damages, and did not specify whether the regulatory language placed further constraints on the court's discretion in awarding damages. Navajo Nation, 852 F.3d at 1130. Likewise, although the court in Seneca Nation awarded damages that were facially reasonable, its opinion can also plausibly be read as endorsing the Nation's theory of damages. See id. at 151–52 ("Moreover, questioning the validity of the Nation's per-person amount is not a proper task for the Court at this juncture. . . . [T]hat is a matter properly addressed through contract negotiations or through declination of the proposed amendment.").

those cases, and DOI may choose to argue that the one-off expenses included in this award should be excluded from any judgment in those cases.

Notwithstanding the Nation's repeated arguments against the use of a facial reasonableness standard, this court will not revisit its earlier conclusion that facial reasonableness is the applicable standard. Applying that standard, this court concludes that $15,762,985 is facially reasonable.
